Raman Bhardwaj

Two of Raman's paintings were selected for an exhibition entitled "The Exchange"- a show featuring emerging artists of color origin and based in the Piedmont Triad area. The exhibit is organized by the African American Atelier in the Greensboro Cultural Center, downtown. The opening reception is on April 5 (First Friday) at 6:30 pm, and the show remains open until May 26. "Gypsy Girl" is 16x20 inches (utilizing mixed media) and "Tribal Beauty" is 18x24 inches (utilizing mixed media).

Raman's painting process is based on "Paraeidolia" which means finding recognizable forms in patterns where none exist, such as forms in clouds. Raman begins by disrupting the white of the canvas by spreading wet paint, and then allowing it to start revealing some forms to him. Taking inspiration and visual stimulation from there, he uses his skills of anatomy and figure drawing. The end results are unique, abstracted and styl-ized figurative works.
